His talk will help people think about how to craft their story and inspire them to envision their true potential as a leader. Dropped some great gems in his session.

Speaking Topics

Using Your SuperPowers : Embracing The Power of Your Imagination

No great discovery, invention, or solution has ever been developed without imagination. Humanity is the only creature with this super power, but we are slowly allowing it to diminish.

You Are The Headliner, So Act Like It

Every individual is a book filled with unique stories. However, many people walk through life never knowing or embracing their own story. It is your responsibility to take the helm and write your own story and live by it.

Don't Call It A Pass : You Fumbled

The need for leadership is a constant in any business, organization, or team. The fact is, no leader will be in their position forever so what happens when the leader leaves or can no longer lead? How do we handle Leader Succession?

Don't Call It Communication If You're The Only One Talking

In John Maxwell's book "Many communicate but few connect," he emphasizes the importance of effective communication in building strong relationships. True communication requires both speaking and listening, and that it's not enough to simply talk at someone. Only when we focus on connecting with others by actively listening and empathizing with their perspectives, which can lead to deeper and more meaningful relationships.
