Human Trafficking Abolitionist

Sabrina spent 25 years building partnerships as a Global Business Development Manager for software companies. In 2021 her attention to the atrocities of modern slavery consumed all her focus and she left the IT world. She went to Anchorage Alaska to fight human trafficking, boots-on-the-ground and became the Property Manager for transitional housing at Anchorage's women's emergency shelter. This experience put her toe-to-toe with Traffickers and introduced her to victims and survivors. The Alaska Department of Public Safety brought her on to the Sex Offender Registration Unit. Today, she is a TEDx Speaker and empowers people in the fight against human trafficking.

HOBBIES

You'll often find me standing in a river waving a stick! Fly fishing and all things outdoors are my go-to for recreation and stress relief. I sing backup in a friend's Punk-Rock band and sometimes they let me open with an electric Ukulele. My only son is getting married, my future daughter-in-law has promised me grand babies, maybe even two at a time, and right now my focus is making the world a safer place for them!
